

I am appalled at the lack of time and consideration given to the public who own the airways to consider the issue of media consolidation. I do not favor media consolidation. Democracy depends on the public receiving diverse opinions and information, not less. Even now, without cable, people have limited access to their senators and representatives. The FCC must be the protector of information.

the corporate/private interest consolidation of the media. It is corrupt to try to sell it any other way. I earnestly urge a vote against further consolidation. In fact, I think the public would be better educated by a return to the Fair Doctrine concept.
